Investment in gender equality is essential to re-building post COVID, with reports of rising violence against women[^7], as well as higher adverse economic impacts caused both by increased unpaid care work responsibilities and the fact that women typically earn less and work in more insecure and informal jobs than men[^8]. Women make up 39% of global employment but account for 54% of overall job losses due to the COVID-19 crisis[^9].

Government responses have been insufficient during the pandemic, with only a small fraction of social protection, labor market and fiscal policies assessed as gender-sensitive[^10].

[^7]: There has been an overall increase in the number of women calling helplines and reporting violence, across different countries. UN Women (2020). COVID-19 and violence against women and girls: Addressing the shadow pandemic.

[^8]: Globally and across all regions and country income groups, women have been affected by employment loss to a greater extent than men. At the global level, the employment loss for women stands at 5.0 per cent in 2020, versus 3.9 per cent for men. In absolute numbers, an estimated 64 million women globally became economically inactive in 2020 – not engaged in paid work, but also no longer looking and/or available to start work. ILO (2021). ILO Monitor: COVID-19 and the world of work. Seventh edition.

[^9]: COVID-19 and gender equality: Countering the regressive effects, Mckinsey, July 2020

It is estimated that intimate partner violence costs economies between 1.2-2.1% of GDP. Investments in quality childcare services have the potential to increase women’s employment rates up to 10 percentage points and promote decent care jobs. Increased tax receipts and social security contributions can partially off-set the costs of such services.

Women’s political representation and high levels of participation can also lead to an increase on health, education spending, and more gender-responsive laws and higher disbursements of foreign aid. More women in parliaments has also been found to increase the strength of climate change policies, which lead to lower CO2 emissions per capita.

[12] These findings are based on a costing analysis for childcare services in South Africa and Uruguay, which found that women’s employment rates could increase by between 3.2 (less ambitious scenario in Uruguay) to 10.1 (more ambitious scenario in South Africa) percentage points. Between 36% to 52% of investment fiscal cost can be recuperated through the additional workers’ taxes and social security contributions. See UN Women. 2019. Progress of the World’s Women: Families in a Changing World.
The Generation Equality Forum is a landmark global initiative, driving commitments that embed gender equality as a central component of Building Back Better from COVID-19 and fuel a significant and lasting change for generations to come.

The Generation Equality Forum Action Coalitions are the world’s roadmap for gender equality. These innovative, multi-stakeholder partnerships are focused on the most critical areas in gender equality to achieve concrete change for women and girls worldwide.

This is the most critical moment in a generation to invest in gender equality, halt roll-backs in rights and accelerate momentum for women’s safety, leadership and economic opportunity.
The Action Coalitions have shared blueprints for the actions they view as critical to creating gender-equal societies as the world rebuilds post COVID-19.

Commitments are essential to accelerating investment in and implementation of these actions to catapult progress on gender equality. They will be included as part of an overall Action Coalitions tracking and accountability framework.
Generation Equality Action Coalitions seek transformation – of structures, systems and power – both in terms of concrete change and also in terms of overall ways of being and working.

In so doing, the Action Coalitions seek to build a collective vision through dynamic approaches of co-creation, centering on dialogue and shared perspective. Youth voices and leadership are critical to the transformative vision of the Generation Equality Action Coalitions.

"No one can wait any longer. With the driving energy of a new vast and diverse population of feminists across multiple sectors, we can and must achieve gender equality in our generation. The Forum will help us turn the promise of the Beijing Platform for Action into a lived global reality through smart, targeted and financed actions that deliberately break the old barriers and cumulatively entrench human rights."

Phumzile Mlambo-Ngcuka,
Executive Director UN Women

"Women in our country are free and every day that goes by we hope for the end of inequality. We want to live in a truly human society, struggling daily to achieve the ideal, the utopia for which French revolutionaries dreamed since the 18th century: freedom, equality, and fraternity."

Andrés Manuel López Obrador,
President of Mexico

"We have seen, when adversity has struck, that women have been in the front line, but have not received the symbolic and material recognition they deserve. We know that, without resolute action, the current crisis could end up exacerbating inequalities, with millions of more girls out of school, with millions of women losing access to family planning. Also, with millions of women sinking into poverty, sometimes starvation, because they are over-represented in the informal economy, which has been the hardest hit by the pandemic and its repercussions."

Emmanuel Macron,
President of the French Republic
“This is an urgent global agenda made even more pressing by the roll-backs in our rights we are seeing due to COVID-19. Youth all over the world are watching and waiting. We are tired of hearing words and commitments without immediate actions - now is the moment for action.”

Elvira Pablo,
Generation Equality Youth Task Force

“I’ve seen firsthand what we can do when we bring women-led grassroots organizations and major companies to the table. We can accomplish much more together than we ever could alone.”

Eva Longoria,
Actor and activist

“We must take decisive, collective, urgent and transformative action to ensure that our daughters and sons - and our grandchildren - realize equality, development and peace across all of our nations.”
